

Languages for Employability

Activity sheet 2

1. Skills are often categorised as either hard skills or soft skills - but what's the difference? Sort the definitions into the correct categories:

Hard Skills	Soft Skills
	hard to measure

~~hard to measure~~ specific skills learned through need to be practiced
 once you learn the required to do a job education over time
 information, you developed through can be used in easy to measure possess the skill practice every job

2. Learning a language can add value to your life and helps with your personal development. Can you figure out the meaning of the symbols below?

Make friends all over the world

Travel more easily

Helps you to stand out on the job market

Protect your brain health

Open doors to new opportunities

Access new books, films and art

3. Having a second language can give you the edge in a wide range of jobs. List 3 jobs and give a reason why knowledge of a second language would be useful:

Example:
A Doctor needs to be a good listener and have good communication skills

Languages for Employability

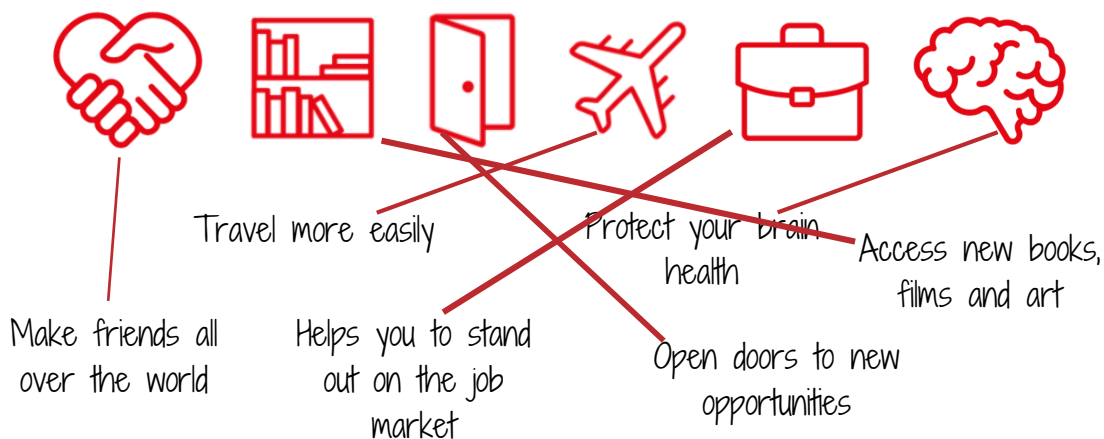

Activity sheet 2

1. Skills are often categorised as either hard skills or soft skills - but what's the difference? Sort the definitions into the correct categories:

Hard Skills	Soft Skills
easy to measure specific skills required to do a job learned through education once you learn the information, you possess the skill	hard to measure developed through practice can be used in every job need to be practiced over time

~~hard to measure~~ specific skills learned through need to be practiced
 once you learn the required to do a job education over time
 information, you developed through can be used in easy to measure
 possess the skill practice every job

2. Learning a language can add value to your life and helps with your personal development. Can you figure out the meaning of the symbols below?

3. Having a second language can give you the edge in a wide range of jobs. List 3 jobs and give a reason why knowledge of a second language would be useful:

Example: A Doctor needs to be a good listener and have good communication skills
--	--	--	--

